Washington Pier Service . ON THE ZAIRE RIVER - The captain dressed in crisply pressed white pajamas, stalked back and forth on the bridge. As his boat growled downriver through a green-black rain forest, be shouted and whistled and pointed to the deck helow.

There, the beasts that had arrived in the night were being auctioned. Glaring, white morning light poured over heaps of motiled fur and squirming legs. It was hot and some of the carcasses were

The night's harvest was mostly monkeys, bundreds of them, some smoked, some rotting, some freshly trapped and twitching. They were tied together by their long tails in easy-carrying bundies. There also were antelope, busb buck and giant forest hogs. A sailor with a sharp knife and bloodstained sneakers was methodically cutting

From the bridge of the Major Mudimbi, the captaio exercised his prerogative as big man on the river. He had first dibs on the game and be bought cheap. His crew hauled the meat upstairs to his private freezer. It would be resold at a 300 percent profit when the boat docked in Kinshasa, the capital of Zaire.

In "Heart of Darkness," Joseph Conrad used this river, then called the Congo, as a metaphorical highway to the black reaches of the human soul. His story was rooted in a journey he made on the river nearly 100 years ago.

• • • •

"Going up that river," Conrad wrote, "was like traveling back to the earliest beginnings of the world, when vegetation rioted on the earth and the big trees were kings." But a century of commerce on the river has tamed much of its menace and burned off the Conradian gloom. The "abominable, abominable satisfactions" that chilled Conrad have been supplanted by the more quotidian mercantile intrigues of modern Alrica. Once a week for decades, the "heart of an immense darkness" has been penetrated by river boats such as the Major Mudimbi.

Part supermarket, part discothèque, part slaugh-terhouse, part brothei, the boat is open 24 hours a day for niver business: the brisk exchange of smoked eels and frilly panties, crocodiles and condoms, giant forest hogs and Dear Heart Complete Skin Lightening Treatment

The Major Mudimbi is an ungainly vessel comprising five rusted barges fashed together with cables and pushed downstream by a four-decked, diesel-powered tug boat.

Ao immense, stinking, ooisy, overheated and overcrowded African market, it is choked with about 3,000 people. There are twice that many animals, a menagerie of farm, forest and river creatures, alive and dead, stulled under benches, hanging from roofs, tied to guard rails.

Each year, a quarter of a million passengers and a million tons of freight travel on the river. In Zaire, an ill-governed, impoverished country with one of Africa's worst systems of roads, river transport is a key to keeping the anemie economy alive. The future of the mineral-rich natioo depends on the river.

Yet, no one, except for a few journalists, masochistie tourists and other refugees from reality, travels for fun oo river boats like the Major Mudimbi. Its decks are slippery with animal and human waste. Passengers occasionally slip off the boat and drown.

In August, according to an on-board security officer, the second- and third-class kitchens served up a bean supper that killed several bundred people. Third-class passengers sleep with their creatures and keep a lookout for slop tossed from an upper deck. Cholera is common.

The 1,000-mile (1,600-kilometer) journey downriver from Kisangani to Kinshasa takes eight days if things go well. If things do not go well, it can take two to three weeks.

Two types of Zairians travel on the river. First, there are those who are poor and cannot afford other transport. In an almost roadless country of 35 million people, where the average income is the equivalent of about $170 a year, this is a large group. Third-class barges, where a ticket costs $17, are always sold out.

The second group comprises those who want to buy goods or make money. At the top of this group is the captain, the man with the white pajamas, the private freezer and the power to dictate his prices. At the bottom, there are river people who briefly board the Major Mudimbi to trade, preferably oot with the captain. In between there are small merchants who reserve second-class compartments, and sell their wares to river people at inflated prices.

The end of the line for river boats traveling east from the capital is Kisangani. Just beyond the town is a series of impassable rapids. When Conrad signed on as a river boat captain on the Congo in 1890, his journey ended at Kisangani. It was the Inner Station, the heart of darkness.

The town was carved out of the bush at the end of a octwork of river trading stations. The octwork was run by Belgian agents who were employed by a colonial creation unlike any other in Africa. The Congo Free State virtually belonged to one man, King Leopold II of Belgium, His agents presided over the collection and export of ivory and rubber, and the king pocketed the profits. Under pressure from world opinion, the Belgian government took the king's kingdom away from him in 1908. The Congo slid into a half-century of paternalistic Belgian rule. Then, with the rest of colonial Africa, the Congolese people demanded independence. The new republic was a seemingly ungovernable amalgam of 200 tribes, of which none represented more than 4 percent of the total. The country stumbled through five years of anarchy. In the mid-1960s, one man again seized cootrol.

In the Congo Free State, as Conrad wrote, it was impossible to travel the river without feeling the rapacity of Leopold. In modern Zaire, as passage on the Major Mudimbi demonstrates, it is impossito curb spending. A gradual cutback in consumption would be good for the United States and the global economy by reducing trade imbalances that so

U.S.-Soviet Talks Start on Test Curbs

GENEVA (Reuters) — The United States and the Soviet Union started their first oegotiadons in seven years Monday on curbing nuclear ten-explosions, and the chief U.S. negotiator said two treaties could be ready withio six mooths.

The oegotiator, Robert Barker, said the first order of business in the two-week round at the Soviet diplomatic mission here would be renegoti-ating two pacts signed in the 1970s but never ratified by the U.S. Senate. The treaties limit the size of nuclear tests to 150 kilotons, equivalent to 150,000 tons of TNT.

Forest Fires Devastate Southern U.S.

WASHINGTON (WP) - The most destructive antumn forest fires in more than 20 years are raging across the southeastern United States, bringing to more than 330,000 acres (133,000 hectares) the amount of woodland burned in the past two weeks, federal officials said. They said most of the fires appeared to have been started by atsonists. From Texas to Virginia, dry weather and high winds fueled flames, sending a thick haze of smoke that limited visibility and could be smelled as far north as New York City, U.S. Forest Service officials said Sunday.

In six states, Naoonal Guard troops joined professional firefighters, and volunteers to battle the hlazes Sunday afternoon. No fatalities were reported in the fires, which struck primarily in mountainous, rural areas, Several injuries were reported among firefighters.

Survey of Fliers Backs Deregulation

GENEVA (Reuters) - International frequent fliers want fewer restricdons on airlines and expect as a result to pay less and get more flights, the International Foundation of Airline Passenger Associations said Mortday, reporting oo a survey of 30,000 travelers in more than 100 countries, But the survey also showed huge demand for "improved punctuality" on North American flights.

"Despite the coocerns about safety and the consumer protection issue, people prefer a deregulation system by 2 to 1," said Geoffrey Lipman executive director of the group. European air travelers are increasingly resentful of fare-fixing and capacity-sharing by state-protected airlines the survey showed.

These gates opened onto two narrow ramps that led down to the dock where the Major Mudanti had tied up. The four-foot-wide ramps would soon become gauntlets through which the market women and the boat's passengers beasts and freight had to pass.

When the boat first docked, a dozen gendarmes appeared to have the situation well in hand. In dark sunglasses and black helmets, with billy clubs clenched in white gloves. they looked disciplined and fierce. They guarded the gates between the market women and the boat.

But when the market women caught sight of the first bundle of fresh monkeys, they pushed aside the gendames, squeezed through the gates and thundered down the ramps.

Porters staggered up the camp with large loads on their heads -sacks of charcoal, steamer trunks, crates of catfish or live pigs.

Fistfights hroke out. Porteri were knocked off their feet. Pigs squealed and tried to bite market women. Bags of charcoal ripped npen. Uodeterred, the women pressed on in the direction of the monkeys. The gendarmes becke off.

Conventional Forces

Throughout the West the wails are heard: Eliminating medium-range missiles from Europe will soon lay pitilessly bare the West's weakness in conventional forces. That's baloney. Many a nuclear layer will survive the prospective Euromissile agreement, and in any case destroying missiles so recently deployed is not the cause of NATO's convennonal arms worries. These go back decades.

If nuclear arms reductions force NATO to deal with the non-nuclear arms balance, all the better. But the allies have to begin by jointly facing a central fact: There is no way that NATO is going to spend the huge sums needed to match Warsaw Pact num-bers in manpower, fighter aircraft, tanks and the like. The only way to establish a more equitable balance is through negotia-tions with Moscow. A decade of futile talks on the subject in Vienna has made plain that this is no simple task.

New and broader talks on conventional forces will begin next year, and Mikhail Gorbachev has begun to speak of cuts and of changes in posture that Western leaders and experts applaud. Fine. But first both sides have to do a lot of bomework on a negotiable and wise proposal.

The conventional wisdom about conventional forces in Europe is facile. In geography, manpower and tanks the Warsaw Pact is superior. But add the quality of weapons and the nature of the two alliances, and it is unclear how militarily meaningful the pact's advantages are. The imbalance is nonetheless unsettling if the West is to rely less on nuclear and more on conventional deterrence. Many in NATO call for a conventional buildup. Yet budgetary and population indicators point downward. Together with a declining European fear of Soviet invasion, these trends make matching the pact's numbers impossible. What of achieving a better balance through negotiated mutual reductions? As conventional manpower talks dragged on in Vienna year after year, this option, too, has looked hopeless. The new talks will feature bolder ground rules: covering the Atlantic to the Urals, not just Central Europe; and embracing weapons, not just manpower. These broader guidelines do not guaranthe progress. The old burdles remain: agree-ing on fair force levels given geographical differences; establishing equivalence be-tween different kinds of weapons; verifying the results. Still, the new talks could break the rid larger the old logjam - if the two sides put their minds to it. Mr. Gorbachev speaks of a new "defensive" military doctrine and of asymmetries requiring the side that has more to cut more. These words deserve to be tested. The place to begin is with the Soviet proposal for talks between military leaders on doctrine. These are particularly crucial because both sides are moving toward a dangerous quick-strike capability. Mean-while, the NATO countries need to develop a proposal that they can lay on the table when the new talks begin. What counts is not precisely matching the two sides' forces, but guaranteeing to each side a sufficient capability for deterrence. First the allies have to agree on how to proceed. This will require detailed study and imagination. While some good thinking has been done, it is only a start and there is little sign that it has reached the levels of leadership necessary to make beadway. The United States is the natural leader of this process, and those who serve the present administration and plan to serve the next ought to get on with the work.

The leader of the Soviet Union, Mikhail Gorbacbev, draws world attention today not because he presides over a society of brilliance, accomplishment and popular well-being, but because of his determination to rescue his country from what he described last week as "a pre-crisis situation" notable for aberrations "in the social, spiritual and moral spheres." says, unproduced plays, unscreened or mutilat-ed films, unexhibited paintings. All of this is well known to Russians themselves. If they do not say so, this is not only because to do so still may be dangerous but because it seems intolerable to confront the waste of it all. Industry and the economy were in progress before 1914. Russia was the most rapidly de-veloping nation in Europe. The subsequent crippling of the economy resulted from the world war, and from the civil war and destructive Western interventions which followed the revolution, but it also followed from the ignorance and doctrinaire arrogance of Lenin and his associates. They knew little of how a society and an economy really functioned. Lenin wrote that "the great majority" of modern industrial and administrative funcuons "have become enormously simplified and reduced, in practice, to very simple operations such as registration, filing and checking. Hence they will be quite within the reach of every literate person." Any worker could run a power station. It was the capitalists who pretended otherwise, in order to protect their privileges. In practice, this belief created a centrally planned command economy which, in the guise of rationality, produced a system without rationality, where today it is all but impossible to discover real costs, real margins, real de-mand, real markets. It produced the disaster of agricultural collectivization, which cripples Soviet farm production to the present day but which even Mr. Gorbachev is compelled, for ideological reasons, still to defend.

Russia in 1914 was badly and oppressively governed. The middle classes were largely emancipated out sun nyeu in essentiany me-dieval conditions. The way the country worked was only painfully changing. Instead there was world war, revolutioncollectivization, Stalinism and then another war. Max Beloff, the British historian of Soviet Russia, wrote more than 20 years ago that little remains there "to attest to the fact that one is present at the building of what once was her-alded as 'a new civilization." "He said we must now see what happened there as merely yet. another Russian time of troubles.

Nothing has happened in the last two decades to cause one to change that judgment. Even if Mikhail Gorbachev succeeds in every single one of the reforms be wants to carry out. he will merely bring his country a little closer to the levels of social, political and material wellbeing which are taken for granted in Western Europe, Japan and the United States. What, then, was it all about? The October revolution was a tragedy -a tragedy because it did begin in noble purpose and an undeniable intention to make men better. It is a tragedy which, as Mr. Gorbachev demon-strates, despite himself, is not over yet.

China: The Economic Challenge Will Require Skillful Managing

N EW YORK - The 13th con-

After last winter's turbulent student demonstrations, the dismissal of Hu Yaobang as tions, the distinistal of FIU Y acroang as general secretary and the campaign against "bourgeois liberalism," the most remarkable thing about this congress was its bland progression toward a conclusion carefully negotiated by Deng Xiaoping last August. For example, Mr. Deng's rural reforms have had a positive effect on the farmer but also have thrown China's central planning mechanism out kilter. Freed from the communes by Mr. Deng back in 1978, given the land they farmed under no-cost leases, told that they could sell what they grew al market prices, farmers began turning out record harvests. In September the Yangtze Valley no chance to spend money on them-selves are doing so. While farmers build their houses, county govern-ments buy trucks and cars, increase salaries and rent summer guest houses for their personnel. Factory managers use their discretionary funds for workers' bonuses, certainly long needed, and better dormitories or canteens. Meanwhile, irrigation works are not being maintained, and here and there some of the Yangtze dike system is crumbling into the water. County roads fall into disrepair and bridges are not being maintained, Except in a few showplaces, factory equipment is ancient, inefficient and often held together with twine and hope.

The result is growing inflation, as General Secretary Zhao admitted at his post-congress press conference. In-

And be-cause local governments are spending far more on consumption than on infrastructure, the central government has had to step in to make up the difference. There is now an unplanned budget deficit that China deals with by the classic method of printing more money. In the first six months of this year the money supply increased by 50 percent at an annualized rate.

That is not the only source of inflation. For years the government kept-food prices artificially low and accepted shortages. When, in order to deal with both food shortages and rural poverty, the government al-lowed farmers to sell at flea market prices, shortages disappeared but the cost of food items rose to reflect the actual cost of production plus a profit for the farmer. Now, worried about inflation, the government has again slapped price controls on some farm products like eggs and chickens.

Worried about declining grain pro-duction as farmers shifted to more lucrative market crops, the government last year went back to grain quotas at fixed prices. But now farmers will spend only the bare minimum, needed to bring in the grain they must sell to the government, and not a penny more. So when fertilizer increases in price, as it did this year, farmers us Western observers have noted the departure from the Central Commit-new general secretary, Zhao Ziyang, told the foreign press: "Some friends abroad think there is a reform faction and a conservative faction. I would say all those who base their analysis of China on this idea will make one mistake after another."

The breakdown of the leadership into "conservatives" (the black hats) and "reformers" (the white hats) has more meaning for foreigners, who prefer arguing personalities to exam-ining policies, than for Chinese. Closer up, not only is it difficult to tell what color the hats really are, but some in the hierarchy seem to switch them frequently. If some of the reforms associated with Mr. Deng seem in trouble, and indeed they are, it is Hopeful Signs in South Africa Improvement for Tunisians?

The release of Govan Mbeki will be of real importance if it proves to be a step in an evolving process of freeing all of the ANC leadership, including Nelson Man-dela, and legalizing the ANC. The ANC does not speak for all South African blacks, but it speaks for most. No meaningful negotiations are possible without it.

There was another recent sign of compro-mise on the part of President P.W. Botha. He implemented an interracial administration that links the leadership of Kwazulu, homeland of the Zulus, with the white leadership of Natal. It falls short of the integrated administration first proposed by Gatsha Bathelezi, leader of the Zulus, but it serves as a model for power sharing, a welcome departure from apartheid. Desmond Tutu, the Anglican archbishop of Cape Town, has told Mr. Botha that he must "release all our leaders" if be is to influence the "intractable situation" gripping the country. Obviously, Mr. Mbeki's release is at best a beginning.

To me, that last item counts beavito be gratuitously abusive about it. But there is a kind of Soviet appreciation for the American system that matters considerably — the kind reflected in Mr. Gorbachev's experimentation with glasnost and market ways. The more of it that Americans see, the more appreciation they will have for the Soviet system, and the more interest they will bave in put-ting relations on a firmer basis. not now and never have been one of them, but it seems to me unfair and hypocritical to suggest that behavior so widespread and so widely accepted should prevent someone from holding high office — even a Supreme Court seat. It is true that Judge Ginsburg, like all those other pot smokers, was breaking the law. So were people who drank homemade booze during Prohibition, or who until recently in numerous states or localities drank any kind of liquor. So are those today who drink it past a certain blood-alcohol level, or before they reach a certain age. It is true, too, that Judge Ginsburg was being considered for a law enforcement position. But he already holds one, on the U.S. Court of Appeals. Should be resign it, although he clearly has not been incapacitated by past behavior? He also may have evaded the question of drug use - not, of course, meaning alcohol use, although alcohol - is the most used and abused drug among Americans — when he sought employment at the Justice Department. That is another serious offense - and another committed all the time by jobseekers without number, most of whom go on to respectable lives and careers. Should none but certifiably pure lawyers who never smoked marijuana, fudged a resume or broke any law be eligible for judgeships? If so, Chief Jus-tice William Rehnquist should step down: be once was fined for speeding in

NEW YORK - Numerous valid Vermont, And a kind of generational N reasons appeared to be developing for the rejection of Douglas Ginsburg. President Reagan's second-choice nom-would be eligible for the bench. The root problem, however, was not > the deed itself, the use of drugs, even if only marijuana. The response - in part, a rush by conservatives to be rid of a nominee whose "confirmability" they had come to douht - was rightcously moralistic on the part of a public spurred on by the press's dubious new trend toward intrusive inquiry.

Already that combination has driven Gary Hart and Senator Joseph Biden of Delaware from the presidential race, and damaged the Pat Robertson campaign. Rumors without evidence persist about Governor Mario Cuomo of New York, He, Governor Bill Clinton of Arkansas and Senator Sam Nunn of Georgia all cited the burdens of unrelenting press scrutiny of their families and private lives as one reason they would not run for the presidency. Who knows how many other able persons stay out of public life for that reason?

In the wake of the Ginsburg withdrawal, Senator Albert Gore Jr. of Tennessee and former Governor Bruce Bahbitt of Arizona, both Democratic candidates for president, have felt forced to disclose that they, too, like so many Americans, smoked marijuana in the past - in Mr. Gore's case while he was a soldier in Vietnam, as well as when he was a student and when he was a young reporter.

The political consequences remain to be seen, although, as Mr. Babbitt put it, "I bave a feeling that 50 or 60 or 70 percent of America would be disqualified" if pot-smoking were the standard. What is happening here? Why this sud-den piety about public life in a society reeking of liquor, offering the world's most demanding market for drugs, in which is taken an exidencie of a fatal which it takes an epidemic of a fatal disease to curb freewheeling sexual be-havior? Is this new standard a reaction from an older, puritanical America that never approved these developments? Or is it instead a taste for new sensations, new diversions, in a society becoming jaded by its own excess? Or both?

Either way, the press risks much to its eagerness to hold public figures to the new standard of moralism. Aside from the hypocrisy of editors and reporters, themselves not unfamiliar with adultery and marijuana, freedom of inquiry is too important to be called into question by intrusive, arrogant and sanctimonious prying into private lives and behavior. Isn't the public that enjoys the result-ing headlines being taught to consider a free press as no more than a gossip column or a scandal sheet? The New York Times.

It is an unexceptional argument which com-mands wide support. Nobody expects Mr. Murdoch to be allowed in buy The Financial Times if he were to bid for it, which he has not. But the reasons are the need for diversity and competition in the press, and not, as Mr. Lewis would have it, Mr. Murdoch's behavior as a propri-etor — a subject on which Mr. Lewis cannot even get his facts right.

What absolute tosh! The Sunday Times bought newspaper serial rights for "Spycatcher" at great expense and published a huge extract from the book before it was published in America and in defiance of government orders not to publish. The Sunday Times and its edi-tor have been sued for criminal contempt by the attorney general and risk substantial fines and possible jail for defying the government. The paper bas been in the forefront of the legal battle to publish "Spycatcher." At buge cost it has referred the issue to the European Court of Human Rights, and its latest effort to have the legal han lifted begins in the High Court this month.

If any other newspaper had fought so hard for the freedom of the press, Mr. Lewis would no doubt be the first to praise it. Because The Sunday Times is owned by Rupert Murdoch, he seems not even to know about it. I used to regard Mr. Lewis as a serious columnist. No longer.

Nice Days in Washington, Outdoors

WASHINGTON --- Two stories, one perhaps apocryphal and the other a matter of record, underscore the difficult crosscurrents flowing through Washington during these golden yet sad days.

The first involves a prominent Democrat often mentioned as a strong presidential possibility. His reason for not one perfect fall day follows another. Selrunning, he is supposed in have said privately, is that he is unwilling to become the hapless Herbert Houver of the 1990s, cleaning up after Ronald Reagan's do-nothing, let-the-problems-accumu-late, Calvin Coolidge act of the 1980s.

The other came last week in congressional testimony from David S. Ruder, chairman of the Securities and Exchange Commission. More than two weeks had passed since the stock crash, yet Mr. Ruder told incredulous members of Congress that he had yet to brief the president of the United States about it or even have a detailed conversation with him. Little wonder they don't build cars like they used to. Building a pen is difficult enough.

Oh, the elegant lines of the 1925 Hispano Suiza. Oh, the elegant lines of the 1927 Parker Duofold.

The car may no longer be available but happily the pen is making a welcome return. We have long yearned to recreate this favourite Parker design. And our approaching centenary has provided a suitable excuse.

Like today's top cars the Parker Duofold Centennial boasts working parts that are 'state-of-the-art.'

But unlike them, it boasts workmanship that is somewhat old fashioned.

Rather than mould the cap and barrel 'en masse,' we machine them as we did in the old days, from a solid block.

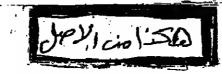

Rather than cut the nib from some modern metal, we stay true to gold. Rather than slit the nib on some new fangled contraption, we still do the job by hand, using a blade no thicker than a human hair.

And just as Hispano Suiza road tested its cars thoroughly after manufacture, we put our pens through their paces.

Upon completion, each Duofold Centennial is examined by a white gloved inspector. If deemed perfect, it is filled, written with and cleaned before being released for sale.

It is an exhausting way to produce a pen. But, as with the Hispano Suiza, the looks and handling provide ample reward.

New Leading Candidate For Supreme Court Named by White House

next nominatioo. Mr. Reagan and other White House officials criticized the news media and Education Department officials, saying they misinterpreted a phone call between Secretary of Education William J. Bennet and Judge Ginshurg last week.

But an Education Department official said it was the fault of the White House.

Asked Monday if he was embarrassed by the failure of Judge Gins-ourg's nomination. Mr. Reagan said, "No, but I think there are others that should be."

As the selection process moved toward an expected announcement by the end of the week, Mr. Reagan branded as "a distortion" reports burg to how out 10 days after he was chosen. The judge came under fire after acknowledging that he and 70s.

The White House spokesman, Marlin Fitzwater, said Judge Kennedy was the leading candidate but added that it was sull possible that someone else would be chosen. Already some conservatives, still angry about the Ginsburg episode, are raising questions about Judge Kennedy,

"If they think they had problems with Ginsburg. I wonder what they re going to have with Kenne-dy," he said.

With regard to the Ginsburg nomination, Mr. Reagan asserted that there was no administration involvement in the withdrawal and said. "He chose to leave in view of the harassment that was coming. Minutes later, he tempered that remark by saying only that Judge Ginsburg had been subjected to "the clamor that arose."

'Aging' Takes Increasing Toll on Reagan Presidency

By Steven V. Roberts New York Times Service WASHINGTON - President Rooald Reagan's second

failure to two weeks to place his nominee on the Supreme Court demonstrates his declining political influence and ability to shape public policy in his final 14 months in office, political analysts to both parties say. Mr. Reagan still retains the enormous power that attaches to the presidency, including the authority to conduct foreign affairs and to veto legislation. But he now is viewed as less able than at any time to the last seven years to impose his will on the government.

"Of course it burts the president to lose two Supreme Court nominees," said a Republican politician with close ues to the White House. "It shows that the pendulum has swung, that the president is weak. Taken in light of the year the poor guy's been having, the editorials will start spewing forth that this administration is over. But doggone it, presidencies age, and this is an aging presidency.

For the last several weeks, Washington has seen the signs of aging, loss and defeat. Two weeks ago the Senate rejected Mr. Reagan's first choice for the Supreme Court, Judge Robert H. Bork, on a 58-42 vote, the largest defeat for a court nominee in history. Many lawmakers said their votes were based on what they saw as Judge Bork's insensitivity to individual rights.

The Assurated Press

On Saturday, Judge Douglas H. Ginsburg, Mr. Rea-gan's second selection, asked that his name be withdrawn after questions were raised about his legal ethics and personal life, particularly his admission that he had smoked manjuana while teaching at Harvard Law School. Amid the turmoil, Mr. Reagan's wife, Nancy, underwent surgery for breast cancer and, four days later, her mother died. Last week Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger, one of the president's oldest and closest advisers, resigned his post, citing the illness of his own wife. Jane.

The resignation of Mr. Weinberger, who had served through Mr. Reagan's cotire tenure, was a major blow, White House aides said. He was the third cahinet officer to resign this fall, and his departure leaves only one longtime associate in Mr. Reagan's inner circle, Attorney General Edwin Meese 3d, whose relationship with the president dates to Mr. Reagan's days as governor of California.

In addition, the White House has been forced to negotiate with Congress on two issues, the hudget deficit and arms control, that Mr. Reagan bad largely dominated in the first years of his presidency.

To analysts the two sets of talks indicate that the president can no longer push his own program through Congress. But at the same time, they say, the negotiations highlight the fact that Congress cannot ignore the president's power to veto measures he does not like and the fact that Mr. Rengan often makes the vetoes stick.

Through all these troubles, friends and advisers say Mr. Reagan has generally maintained his upbeat attitude and "unquenchable optimism," as Mr. Weinberger put it in a Rose Garden ceremony marking his departure last week. "A lot of occasions during the past year could have gotten the president down, but I don't see it," said one White House official, "He either puts on a great show, or one of the secrets of his longevity is his ability to roll with the punches. His aides seem to age with considerably more ed than he does.

A longtime friend, who talked to the president last week, said he was in a "great mood," telling jokes and looking forward to spending the Thanksgiving holiday at his ranch in California.

However, the friend added, the Supreme Court defeats, combioed with political problems on other fronts, had undermined the president's natural ebullience.

"He's not a caretaker if he's still out there in the middle of a possible budget deal, or on the verge of signing an arms reduction agreement," insisted one senior official. But if Mr. Reagan is not yet a "caretaker." there is a widespread consensus in Washingtoo that his influence has been severely reduced. He can no longer, as he once did, frighteo lawmakers with threats of retaliation, or appear on television and stimulate support for his policies.

By Thomas L. Friedman-New York Times Service AMMAN, Jordan — Jordan has rejected an American proposal that the United States and the Sovier Uoion cosponsor direct peace talk between Israel and a Jordani Palestinian delegation, according to a Jordanian official.

"We rejected the idea," the official said. "King Hussein wants a full international conference."

Secretary of State George P. Shuitz had made the proposal for Soviet-American sponsorship of negotiations between Jordan and Israel three weeks ago, first during talks Oct. 16 in Israel with Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir and Foreign Minister Shimon Peres and later in London on Oct. 19 with the Jordanian king.

Mr. Shultz initiated the proposal as an alternative to a full-scale international conference that would involve the five permanent members of the United Nations Security Council, as well as Israel, Syria and a Jordan-Palestinian delegation Hussein has long favored a fullscale conference, but Mr. Shamin rejects the idea, preferring direct negotiations.

Mr. Shultz apparently hoped that a smaller conference, in which the Soviets and Americans would sponsor the opening session and then, in effect, step aside as Jordan and Israel negotiated directly, would be a compromise acceptable to both sides. It could satisfy Jordan's demand for some kind of international cover for entering into peace talks with Israel as well as satisfying Israeli demands for direct talks with Jordan.

Mr. Shamir was not enthusiastic about the Shultz proposal but he agreed to have him explore it with Hussein and the Soviet Union.

According to the Jordanian official, Hussein rejected the idea when it was broached by Mr. Shultz in London.

INTERNATIONAL HERALD TRIBUNE, TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 10, 1987

For a long time, a car's technical and performance potential was judged by its sheer size and external dimensions. Then, in the mid-60s, BMW started offering advanced topclass technologies in more compact, exclusive sporting saloons. And this concept of "maximum driving pleasure", rather than "the bigger the better", earned both respect and enthusiasm from demanding as well as committed drivers.

This passion for cars, and BMW's commitment to providing the ultimate in driving perfection, demolished all the old clichés about big and small cars. Today's large BMWs always surprise drivers by their handling and mobility, which put one sooner in mind of much smaller cars. And vice versa.

The sophisticated and innovative technologies of the compact BMWs invariably remind one of much larger, luxury limousines.

So it's hardly surprising that BMW's top-range saloon - the 12-cylinder 750i – has an agility that even we have to admit you'd scarcely associate with its impressive exterior.

And the interplay goes further. Because in the BMW 318i you'll rediscover many of the 12-cylinder's fundamental characteristics. Both engines, the new 4-cylinder and 12-cylinder, were designed with the same objectives in mind.

The hydraulic valve-play equalizer on both engines ensures minimal maintenance requirements. The identical, close cylinder arrangement makes both engines exceptionally light. Both are surprisingly economical and ecology-minded as a result of the world's most advanced electronic engine management system. And both set a new standard for smoothness and power development for every car in their class.

Both – the unrivalled 750i and the sporting BMW 3 Series - have been created to give their drivers pure, unadulterated pleasure in driving. And that has always been a classless quality.

INTERNATIONAL STOCK MARKETS

Upheaval Further Slows American Trades Abroad

By JAMES KIM

New York Times Service EW YORK - In late October, as trading surged wildly in stock markets around the world, American investment firms buying or selling forcign stocks found that the already formidable settling of trades in a timely fashion had become even more difficult.

Because there is no efficient central clearinghouse for foreign stock trades. American firms must rely on trade-by-trade settle-ment methods that require batteries of foreign custodians and brokers to keep track of overseas holdings. These methods are a far cry from the computerized system operated by the two nonprofit companies that clear more than 90 percent of American transactions - Depository Trust Co. and National Securities Clearing Corp. While the American system withstood the trading mael-strom in the days following the stock market collapse on access of American Oct. 19, the international firms to foreign clearing operations have been strained ever since.

clearing systems.

Rapid settlement is stymied by the lack of

"It was slow," said Bruce E. Geismar, in charge of settlement at Bear, Stearns & Co. "It's getting slower."

"In times like these, certificates get lost," added the chief of settlement at another New York brokerage firm, "All the problems you can imagine arise at a time like this."

Late settlements cause a variety of problems. Unsettled trades must be carried by investment firms at less than their book value. Also, unsettled trades us up money that could be used for other investments.

Though most brokerage firms do not normally disclose bow often trades are settled late, many back-office experts said that 40 to 60 percent of all foreign transactions involving U.S. investors normally fail to clear within the time prescribed by the stock exchanges' home countries.

Different laws, costoms, languages and clearing mechanisms create many difficulties in settling international trades.

HE CLEARING PROCESS, in general, begins with an investor, who orders a foreign stock through his American broker. The bloker arranges for a foreign broker to make the purchase. The American broker must then arrange for delivery of the actual stock certificates to a custodian, usually an international or foreign bank. The custodian stores the stock for the American broker, who in turn bolds the stock for the ultimate investor.

A breakdown can occur anywhere in the process. But the main problem, according to experts, is that certificates must be delivered each time stocks are bought and sold, a cumbersome and often costly process. In the United States, brokerage firms rely on Depository Trust Co., which is owned by a consortium of banks, as their custodian. Depository Trust keeps track of stocks through a computerized, book-entry system that makes physical delivery unnecessary.

Most foreign stock exchanges have some sort of central system to clear their domestic trades and some of the major exchanges plan to upgrade these systems. Both Japan Securities Clearing Corp., which is owned by the Tokyo Stock Exchange, and London's International Stock Exchange are planning to open new central depositories similar to Depository Trust Co. But market participants said that forcign trades are stymied by the lack of access by American investment firms to these foreign -clearing and depository systems and the lack of international mendor of access by American investment firms to these foreign standards governing equity trading. "Americans have a lot of learning to do," said John Herzog, president of Herzog, Heine, Geduld Inc., a New York brokerage firm. "It's like we're the new kid on the block, and we have to learn how to play stickball."

Big Trading Loss At Gotabanken

Reuter

STOCKHOLM - Gotabanken, Sweden's fourth-largest commer-cial bank, said Monday that losses on options trading of up to 300 million kronor ($49.5 million) would nearly halve its operating profit from 687 million kronor last

Gotabanken's losses are the big-gest suffered by a bank on Swe-den's financial options market, and the Bank Inspection Board reacted to the announcement by calling for stricter regulation of that market. The options market's fast pace and rapid expansion since it opened in 1985 have led to charges that it is too speculative and un-Sound Gotabanken's managing director, Gunnar Malmenstrom, said the losses came through unauthorized index options trading by an employee who was later suspended. The employee was not named.

Mr. Malmenstrom said the bank lost 200 million kronor of its own and 50 million to 100 million kronor in deals on clients' accounts.

He said the bank's monitoring system would be made more stringent, and that Gotabanken would tone down our activities in share option dealing and instead develop traditional banking activities." He said the recent plunge on world stock markets had aggravated the losses, but he did not elabo-Options carry the right to buy or sell shares or bonds within a set ating investment prices. Gotabanken is the latest victim of losses on Sweden's options market. Handelsbanken, the secondlargest Swedish bank, said last month that it had lost about 100 million kronor through unautho-nized dealings. And last winter, a Stockholm city employee lost 475 million kronor of city money on options transactions. Lars Hedberg, head of the gener al affairs division of the Bank In-spection Board, said Monday that the board wanted the Stockholm Bourse to take control of options trading in Sweden, now controlled by two rival exchanges.

Somebody has to have overall responsibility for this trading, spart from us," he said.

New York - Paul A. Volcker's telephone keeps ringing. The callers ask for his advice or sound him out on how much damage has been done. Even out on the street Mr. Volcker can't

At 6 feet 8 inches (2.03 meters) tall, he is hard to miss. People stop him to ask, "Are we going to be all right?" or to say, "We need you back in Washington." The man who was widely regarded as the second most powerful in the United States during his eight years as chairman of the Federal Reserve Board still appears to be the most influential financial figure in the world - especially true following "Black Monday" on Oct. 19, when the Dow Jones industrial average fell 508 points, the worst singleday drop in history. Recently Mr. Volcker was warmly hailed by an overflow crowd of New York's business elite at a huncheon at the Council on Foreign Relations for Michel Camdessus, managing director of the Inter-national Monetary Fund. It was four days after the national Monetary Fund. It was four days after the fall, and rumor was rife that President Ronald Reagan was thinking of asking Mr. Volcker to return to Washington as secretary of the Treasury. Many in the financial community said at the time that such an appointment would signal to a badly shaken Wall Street and world that a man with the legendary right stuff was once more over-seeing the economic well-being of America. Mr. Volcker's departure from the Fed last August had shocked many in the United States and abroad. shocked many in the United States and abroad. "The markets had incredible confidence in these wry, self-deprecating words: "Paul A. Volcker is famous for saving the world, he said modestly," The date was Oct. 2, two and a half weeks before Black Monday.

Four days after the market collapsed, he sat for a second interview. Where Mr. Volcker was somber the first time, warning of serious troubles to come. now that a crisis was at hand his spirits seemed to rise. Talking in a basso profundo in the accents of New Jersey (he grew up in Teaneck, where his father was township manager), he was brighter, clearer and crisper — as though he knew he had a mission again; the familiar one of "saving the world.

Mr. Volcker's characteristic approach to prob-lem-solving is not to assume that the future is out there and that one must go about divining it. Rather, be believes that those charged with run-ning things must take control and not let events develop on their own.

When it comes to policy, he is the ultimate pragmatist, Rules and economic theorems must be set aside. The decision-maker must proceed by "judgment" and rely on his ability to sense the mood — or incipient panic — in the markets. Mr. Volcker is therefore impatient with people wondering whether the real danger now facing the economy is deflation or inflation. "The point I would make is that we don't have to sit here helplessly amid all these kinds of speculation or let them work themselves out in the marketplace," he said. "We can control events, if we do the right

Worth of Shares Today By Patrick L Smith

"Unless we learn this lesson of the 1930s, we could be doomed to repeat it. Protectionism only begets more protectionism. Jobs are lost, not saved. The economy is weak-ened, not strengthened."

There is no sign yet that Con-gress is heading the warning, and its Democratic leaders are pledging to go ahead with the trade bill as a way of reversing the growing U.S. merchandise trade deficit.

The Senate Democratic leader, Robert C. Byrd of West Virginia, said, "The very worst thing we can do is to be panicked into doing nothing."

Another economist, Robert Dunn of George Washington Uni-versity, said the link between the crash and Smoot-Hawley and the current situation will be made, but said the drop in the dollar may be the telling factor.

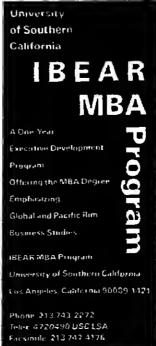

"As the dollar drops," be said. "Congress may say we don't need this sally trade bill. The dollar will help reduce the deficit."

Approval Expected for BA-Caledonian Merger

LONDON - Britain is expected to give conditional approval to a disputed plan for British Caledonian Airways, the independent airline, to merge with the recently privatized British Airways, industry sources said Mon-

Lord Young, the trade and industry sccre-dary, is expected to announce his decision this week after reviewing a report from the Monopolies and Mergers Commission. The two airlines, which had been bitter rivals, announced July 16 that British Airways would acquire the smaller British Caledonian for £237 million ($423 million).

Industry sources said an announcement was likely Wednesday, to coincide with Brit-ish Airways' interim financial report.

But they said Lord Young was expected to attach conditions to his acceptance of the agreement, which British Caledonian's chairman, Sir Adam Thomson, says is vital to his ompany's survival. British Caledonian reported a £19.3 million pretax loss last year. British Airways, which was sold to private investors by Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's Conservative government in a £900 million share issue earlier this year, made a £90 million profit in the first quarter of its 1987-88 financial year. Sir Adam has said that if the deal falls through British Caledonian will be forced to

Under the rules, British Airways' bid automatically lapsed when it was referred to the Monopolies and Mergers Commission.

Toyota Investing Another $300 Million in U.S.

GEORGETOWN, Kentucky Toyota Motor Co.'s U.S. subsidiary said Monday that it would spend another $300 million to expand its automobile plant under construction here, bringing its total investment in the Georgetown facility to $1.1 billion.

Toyota, Japan's leading automobile company, had previously com-mitted $800 million to build its first wholly owned U.S. car manufacturing complex here in an effort to sidestep the quotas that limit its exports to the U.S. market.

Toyota's plan follows the trend of other Japanese car makers with U.S. plants. Spurred by the weak dollar and the threat of new trade barriers, Japanese companies have been making plans to replace im-ported parts with U.S.-produced components

. Honda Motor Co., which opened the first Japanese-owned car as-sembly line in the United States in 1982 at Marysville, Ohin, annonnced earlier this year invest-ments of about $600 million for expansion of engine and car-manufacturing capacity.

Honda said its aim was to increase U.S.-manufactured content of its vehicles to about 70 percent within a few years from the 50 percent level in early 1987.

The Toyota plant, run by Toyota Mator Manufacturing U.S.A. Inc., will manufacture the Camry midsize car, due to go into production next year with target production of 200,000 cars a year. The new facility, scheduled to begin operation in

The court ordered the government to suspend any punitive mea-sures against Autolatina SA, the holding company that groups both subsidiaries. On Friday, Autolatina defied Brazil's rigid price control policy by announcing a price increase of 28 percent for VW vehicles

After Antolatina announced the new prices, the government threat-ened to arrest West German, U.S. and Brazilian officials of Autola-

Base your investment strategy on the solid security of gold.

Money you can trust.

The shock waves that so dramatically rumbled through the world's stock markets are bringing investors back to the fundamentals. No investment is more fundamental than gold.

Why gold? Because gold is a precious metal - not merely a "piece of paper." Its value is intrinsic. Gold moves independently of strictly financial instruments. Gold can be your personal hedge against trade deficits, budget deficits, tight money, loose money, inflation and other political and economic uncertainties.

Building up and maintaining one's personal assets naturally implies risk especially today, when virtually all forms of financial investment are being called into question. Given this overwhelming uncertainty, the shrewdest of today's investors know that a significant personal reserve in physical gold provides the solid bedrock on which to build a strong, more effective investment strategy.

HOW THE MASTERS OF THE UNIVERSE OVERCAME THE ATTACK OF THE DEUTSCHEMARKS.

When a new toy sets out to conquer the world, its timing must be right. Its price-point must be perfect. There is no mercy from the marketplace.

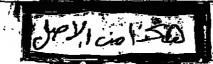

So when the Masters of the Universe invaded Europe, Mattel Inc., like a lot of shrewd companies, lacked in some key currency exchange rates in advance-at the Chicago Mercontile Exchange. And when the Deutschemarks rose up against them, Mattel was able to hold its around.

The moral of the story is pretty clear. It pays to take control of as many sources of risk as possible. And the Chicago Mercantile Exchange has developed better ways for managers to control interest rate risk. Equities risk, And risks on some agricultural commodities. made money using these hedging practices since then, although the falling dollar made the job easier. When the global financial markets panicked in mid-October, Mr. Zimmerman said, he huddled several times a day with committee members. The pace has quickened since then. For instance, Mr. Zimmerman said he expects a phone call at his office every weekday morning at 8 A.M. from Avon Japan's chief financial officer in Tokyo.

"I want to know about the swings io the yen-dollar activity the previous day in the Tokyo market and how heavy the volume was," he said.

This is especially important, Mr. Zimmerman said, as he mulls strategy with Nomura Securities: International Inc. for the stock offering of Avon Japan. The project has been one of his top priotities since the summer, he said.

A week before the markets collapsed, Mr. Zimmerman and Avon's chairman and chief executive, Hicks B. Waldron, spoke with hundreds of potential investors in Tokyo and Osaka, in anticipation that the sale would be wrapped up by the first week in . Novembe

Instead, Normura advised a delay because retail brokerage firms in Japan were apprehensive about pledging capital to new issues after the market's plunge. The weak dollar, oow ataround 135 yen, has brought re-newed hope. Since it will not take as many yen to total $200 million now as Mr. Zimmerman expected, it would when the yen was at 147last summer, he could still raise allion by offering a than Avon had shares will be sold

To Set Aside $2.3 Billion Mr. Balladur is expected to bold For Claims

> By Barnaby J. Feder ier Jush To RICHMOND, Virginia - An expert witness has recommended that A.H. Robins Co. be required to set aside about $2.3 billion to hot compensate 163,000 women who say they were injured by the Dal-kon Shield birth-control device.

The testimony at a federal bank-rupicy hearing Sunday came from Francine F. Rabinovitz, a University of Southern California professor who specializes in statistical analysis of public policy problems. She is representing Robins's insur-er, Aetna Casualty & Surety Co. Her total estimate includes $50 million to pay the claims of 34,000 additional women that she projected would discover that they are infertile or have suffered other injuries from their past use of the intrauterine device.

brokers to offer to sell seats to ABD, Mr. Schmidt-Scheuber said. U.S. District Judge Robert R Merhige Jr. is seeking through the estimation hearings to determine whether a $1.75 billion trust fund proposed by Robins in a reorganization plan would cover the claims.

Earlier, Thomas Crabill, a Peat, Marwick, Main & Co. consultant who is representing Robins's credi-tors, said that $1.63 billion would be a reasonable value for the fund. Both Ms. Rabinovitz and Mr.

Crabill predicted that claims would greatly exceed the $678 million to $1.2 billion estimated by Robins.

As long as man can remember, gold has been the standard of wealth. It has been the best insurance against inflation and times of trouble. More secure than empires, certtainly more secure than paper.

And now there is a new, simple way to buy it.

The new Britannia coin contains one ounce (31.1035 grms) of pure gold.

It is guaranteed by the British Royal Mint, the oldest mint in the world.

It is available from all banks and brokers.

And there are three other coins, which contain half an ounce (15.55 grms), a quarter of an ounce (7.78 grms), and one tenth of an ounce (3.11grms) of gold.

Their price, of course, is determined by the current price of gold. Which, in the long term, has always risen.

WRITING about certain problems he was baving in the 1950s with his work and his marriage, the playwright Arthur Miller de-scribes how be began psychoanalysis but could not go through with it. First, "it was ultimately impossible for me to rick my creativity impossible for me to risk my creativity . . impossible for me to risk my creativity by vacating my own autonomy, however de-structive it might continue to be." Second, "I could not help suspecting that psychoanalysis was a form of alienation that was being used as a substitute not only for Marxism but for social activism of any kind."

Now admittedly there's a difference between Now admittedly there s a difference between being psychoanalyzed and using analysis as "a way of assessing human behavior," as Miller puts it. But for someone even slightly leery of the discipline, he has allowed it to play a powerful role in the story of his life, and he has done so regarding both his creativity and his social activism.

Hardly does he raise the sobject of his youth-ful introduction to Marxism but he observes: "This day's overturning of all I knew of the world revolutionized not only my ideas but also my most important relationship at the
